Green light for Option Four

Beefed up subway, LRT scenario preferred

By TIM WIECLAWSKI
for Metro Ottawa

Call it Transit Option Four, Part Two: Bigger, Longer ... Better?

A marathon joint meeting of Ottawa's transportation and transit committees last night approved a transit plan based on the fourth option put forward by city staff: One that includes light rail lines running as far west as Kanata North and Stittsville, as far east as Trim Road, and into the community of Riverside South—but with conditions on that suburban expansion.

"What we heard from the consultations is people wanted more rail, more transit, sooner," said Mayor Larry O'Brien. "We approved a plan that extended rail east and west and south, tunnel-based, and we will now task staff to come up with an implementation plan based on Option Four to get this done."

The priority will be to complete transit corridors inside the Greenbelt first, before looking to expand rail lines, based on ridership and cost estimates, outside those areas. Any expansion would also be subject to the city having sufficient funding.

Coun. Marianne Wilkinson said completing the transit system inside the Greenbelt is strictly a matter of securing funding. With enough money, she said, it could be mostly done within 10 years, with "a good chance" suburban rail lines will be built before 2031.

Option Four features

» The nearly $4-billion transit plan includes: A downtown subway; Transitway conversion to light rail from Baseline to Blair stations; expansion of rapid bus service to outlying areas; and extending the O-Train to Bowesville Road.

"The growth is going there," she said. "We've already got 43,000 jobs in Kanata. There's a lot of traffic going in both directions. These are areas that need service."

Staff will also study developing a secondary transit corridor, with street cars running along Carling Avenue, Rideau Street and Montreal Road.

Staff will examine moving the south terminus of the north-south rail line to a more central location in the Riverside South community. Lyon Sachs, president of Urbandale Corp, the developers of the area, was pleased to see that considered.

"We can't do this without Option Four, so we've got to finish it off."

Council will vote on the plan May 28.

The committee rejected developing a backup plan suggested by Coun. Clive Doucet.

"If you put all your eggs in one basket, you are risking everything on one throw, when you don't have to and I don't understand that."

David Jeanes of Transport 2000 said Ottawa can't afford to shut down the existing O-Train for three years while it is rebuilt.

"We would never have designed a network like the one ... today because it has no resiliency for bottlenecks or failures whatsoever."

Cash flows for bus upgrades

Announcement made as fleet comes under fire

By TRACEY TONG
and TIM WIECLAWSKI
Metro Ottawa

The city learned yesterday it would receive $12.3 million over 12 years to help renew and replace its aging buses — the same day the condition of OC Transpo's fleet came under fire by the transit union.

The Ontario Bus Replacement Program was announced in the last budget, but Ottawa's share of the fund was revealed at the St. Laurent Bus Depot yesterday. Transportation Minister Jim Bradley said commuters could expect more comfortable rides on new, more accessible buses as Ottawa's share of funding begins to flow.

busted buses?

» The ATU Local 279 report alleges that routine maintenance could have arrested much of the major corrosion problems that has seen the fleet of Orion 6 buses purchased in the late 1990s begin to rust out halfway through its life expectancy.

"I think we'll see a future movement towards public transit. The replacement of buses will make it even more attractive to use public transit," said Bradley.

According to a report yesterday by the Amalgamated Transit Union Local 279, new buses are needed. Maintenance on the ones Ottawa has, the union claims, has been neglected.

"Preventative maintenance ... is now being ignored as mechanics spend the vast majority of their time focusing simply on patching together the number of buses needed for that day," the report — entitled A Transit System In Crisis! — concludes.

The provincial funding covers 33 per cent of the buses and bus improvements, leaving the city responsible for a two-thirds share.

The city will have 48 articulated buses, each at a cost of $640,000, on the roads by September, said Jean-Yves Carrier, the city's manager of transit fleet engineering.

The city is also expected to put three double-decker buses and two diesel-electric hybrid buses on the road by the end of 2008.

"This is essential for the city of Ottawa," said Ottawa Centre MPP Yasir Naqvi.

Union calls for transit overhaul

By TIM WIECLAWSKI
Metro Ottawa

Responsibility for running OC Transpo should come in out of the rain under one umbrella, the union representing transit employees is suggesting.

With four major administrative branches now taking responsibility for various areas of transit service, Amalgamated Transit Union executive Randy Graham said yesterday council should restructure OC Transpo under a single branch of city management, or create a separate commission to manage it.

"It has to be brought under one umbrella. We don't necessarily care if it's changed to a commission or that it's brought to some form of umbrella under the city," Graham said. "Right now there is no one really accountable for the level of service to the people on the street."

Graham said the bureaucratic overlap in the system has, for example, the director of transit services planning bus routes and managing drivers, yet having no control over the buses that operate on the routes, or the mechanics that fix them.

The situation in February, when OC Transpo was forced to reduce service because of a backlog in repairs and a shortage of trained drivers, was a good example of the inefficient system, Graham said.

In a document entitled A Transit System In Crisis!, the union takes aim at a range of issues. The document charges that OC Transpo's administrative structure has virtually excluded the union and individual employees from bringing forward grassroots ideas that could improve the system.

"The union submits that the present administrative structure simply is not working," the document says.

Grant propels unique dance group's growth

By TIM WIECLAWSKI

Philippe Charbonneau's wheelchair has never foiled his lifelong love of dance.

Since being introduced to dance in elementary school, it's been his hobby. But after leaving high school, the 25-year-old had difficulty finding programs to accommodate him.

Then, more than two years ago, artistic directors Renata Soutter and Shara Weaver introduced him to the Propeller Dance group.

"I never knew there was a dance for us before," Charbonneau said. "I could do any move I want and I could enjoy every moment of it."

Charbonneau is now a member of the mixed-abilities Propeller performance group — Ontario's only all-inclusive dance group for people with and without disabilities.

Yesterday, the group announced a $100,000 grant from the Ontario Trillium Foundation to develop new works, teach new classes and build more inclusive dance programs. The group accepted its grant from Ottawa-Vanier MPP Madeleine Meilleur and launched its propellerdance.com website at the National Arts Centre. Renata Soutter, co-artistic director, said over the next two years they want to expand the program and make it more financially self-sufficient.

"We'd love to have a space. Right now we rent space and that's always a challenge for us," she said. "And we'd love to be invited to perform at contemporary dance festivals."

The group started in 2001 as a program for people with disabilities at the school of dance, but it formed an independent organization to expand the integrated dance groups.

Propeller will be performing on June 3 and 4 at the NAC.

As a group, we're a bunch of smart cookies.

Ottawans top the list of the most educated people and the best learners in Canada, according to a new report on learning released yesterday.

Ottawa and Victoria, each with scores of 93, are this year's top performers among Canada's major cities (followed by Calgary and Gatineau at 92) on the Composite Learning Index — the world's only statistical index of lifelong learning, said the Canadian Council on Learning.

There are reasons why cities like Ottawa rank higher than others, said council CEO Paul Cappon. For one, at 57 per cent, Ottawa has the highest proportion of university graduates in the country.

And thanks to the presence of several universities and federal government employees, the National Capital Region generally has a higher level of education, agreed uOttawa registrar Francois Chapleau.

« It's not just learning inside the classroom, but outside as well. There's more access to culture and performing arts and media here. »

Paul Cappon

CEO of Learning Council

Ottawa also ranks high for learning professional skills and personal development, Cappon said.

"It's not just learning inside the classroom, but outside, as well," he said. "There's more access to culture and performing arts and media here."

Ottawa leads a positive trend across the country that has seen Canada improve for the second year in a row on the index, driven by improvement in the areas of work-related learning and learning for personal development.

Cappon said that while Ottawa has a higher formal education rate than Gatineau, growth across the river is mainly driven by skills acquisition.

Gatineau also ranked in the top 10 most-improved cities in Canada, rising 4.8 points in the last year.

For 2008, the national average is 77, an increase of one point from 2007 and four points from the national benchmark of 73 set in 2006.

The Composite Learning Index reports results for 4,700 cities and communities across Canada.

— tracey.tong@metronews.caIS YOUR HEALTH-CARE SYSTEM THERE FOR YOU
WHEN YOU NEED IT?Accessible health care means people getting the

Ontario is meeting this goal in many respects. The Ontario Wait Times Strategy, for example, has successfully reduced wait times for cataract surgery (down from 311 to 118 days), knee replacements (from 440 to 253 days), hip replacements (351 to 198 days) and cancer surgeries (81 to 57 days).

But access to other parts of our health-care system still needs improvement:

- Access to family doctors: over 60% of Ontarians say they can't get to see their doctor within two days of becoming sick; 42% feel they don't get to spend enough time with their doctor; and 39% say they aren't always told about treatment options and involved in decisions about their treatment.
- Finding a family doctor: while over 90% of Ontarians have a family doctor the percentage is lower in some parts of the province and for new immigrants. About 400,000 Ontarians want a doctor, have tried to find one, but can't. Meanwhile, only about 10% of family doctors are taking new patients, down from 40% seven years ago.
- MRI scans: despite a near doubling of MRIs, wait times haven't gone down significantly. As the supply of scans goes up, so too does the demand for them.

What can you do?

Deserter told to leave

U.S. soldier served in Iraq before fleeing to Canada

After a 22-month battle to earn a home in Toronto, a former American soldier was told yesterday he will become the first Iraq War resister to be deported from Canadian soil after his application to stay in the country was rejected.

A dejected Corey Glass, 25, stared blankly at the floor of a tiny room in a Toronto church as members of the War Resisters Support Campaign informed media and other American war resisters of his failed bid to remain in the country and the consequences he now faces.

"He's supposed to leave on his own by June 12," said the group's co-ordinator, Lee Zaslofsky, who came to Canada after fleeing enlistment in the American military during the Vietnam War. "After that, he's subject to deportation."

The rejection, Zaslofsky said, was based on a failed pre-removal risk assessment by Citizenship and Immigration Canada, which found that, if removed from the country, Glass would not be at immediate risk of death, torture, or cruel or unusual treatment or punishment.

Corey Glass, 25, a U.S. soldier who fought in Iraq before deserting and coming to Canada, speaks to the media in Toronto yesterday.

The potential consequence is unclear; past deserters who have returned to the U.S. have received punishments ranging from a dishonourable discharge to jail time in a military prison.

This first rejection could be a chilling sign of things to come for at least nine other war resisters who have requested a pre-removal risk assessment, Zaslofsky said, and could shut the door to other war resisters' attempts to find a home in Canada.

An Indiana native, Glass' tenure with the military began in 2002 when he joined the National Guard to complete "humanitarian work" within the United States, he said. At that time, he had no idea he would end up fighting on foreign shores.

"When I joined the National Guard, they told me the only way I would be in combat was if there were troops occupying the United States," he said. "I signed up to defend people and do humanitarian work filling sandbags if there was a hurricane. ... I should have been in New Orleans, not Iraq."

When he was deployed to Iraq in 2005, Glass said he tried to quit the military and was returned home on a leave later that same year. He then went AWOL for eight months before defecting to Toronto in August 2006.

Tougher label rules proposed

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is proposing tougher food labelling guidelines at a time of growing concern that unknown, potentially hazardous ingredients from abroad are finding their way into the products on Canada's store shelves.

Saying frustrated consumers have lost faith in the labelling system, the Conservative government is planning regulations to ensure that "The truth is, foods marked 'Product of Canada' or 'Made in Canada' may not be very Canadian at all," he said during a press conference at a berry farm in Ontario.

Today, a bottle of apple juice labelled as made in Canada may have been made from apples grown in China, Harper said. And a bar of chocolate might be marked as a Canadian product but be made » Under the initiative, "all or virtually all" of the ingredients in "Product of Canada" items would have to be Canadian, with the only exception being spices or minor additives not available here. Other Canadian-produced foods would be labelled either "Made in Canada from domestic and imported ingredients" or "Made in Canada from imported ingredients."

additives and ingredients produced in foreign countries are kept out of items carrying the "Product of Canada" sticker.

Current rules allow use of that label or "Made in Canada" even if a substantial portion of the product — up to

Ottawa wasting cash: Official

Ottawa is wasting taxpayer dollars and providing a target for identity thieves by forcing the province to create its own citizenship database for enhanced drivers' licences, Ontario's privacy watchdog says.

Information and Privacy Commissioner Ann Cavoukian has urged Ottawa to reconsider this "no-brainer" and give Ontario access to existing federal citizenship information.

Ontario, like some other provinces, is developing a high-tech drivers' licence, which will include citizenship information, as an alternative to passports when driving into the U.S.

"Don't ask us to recreate this information. It would pose enormous risks in terms of inaccuracy, the potential of identity theft (by) creating a new database of very sensitive information, not to mention waste of efficiency and taxpayer dollars. Why would we do this?" Cavoukian said yesterday when she released her annual report.

"It's almost like a make-work project," she said.

Israel, Syria reveal peace talks

Turkey mediates between nations at war for 60 years

Israel and Syria said yesterday they had begun indirect peace talks mediated by Turkey, the first confirmation of negotiations between the long-time enemies in eight years.

In coordinated statements, Israel and Syria said they had begun an open dialogue with the aim of a comprehensive peace. Turkey said delegations of both countries, officially at war since Israel's creation 60 years ago, were already in Istanbul.

The United States said it did "not object," but repeated its criticism of Syria's "support of terrorism" — a reminder for many analysts that U.S. hostility to Damascus, and to its Iranian and Lebanese Hezbollah allies, makes a Syria-Israel deal unlikely before President George W. Bush steps down in January.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Olmert said the process would be long, complex and could end in "difficult concessions" for Israel — an apparent reference to his willingness to hand back the Golan Heights.

"It's always better to talk than shoot," Olmert said, without spelling out what concessions he was thinking of. Just eight months ago, Israeli jets bombed what U.S. officials have called a North Korean-designed nuclear facility in Syria.

An Israeli statement, echoed by one from Syria, said the two sides would now "conduct dialogue in a serious and continuous manner with the aim of reaching a comprehensive peace."

Ski jumpers sue for 2010 spot

Female athletes claim unfair discrimination

A coalition of international women ski jumpers filed suit in Canada yesterday challenging their exclusion from the 2010 Winter Olympics in Vancouver.

The lawsuit against the Vancouver Organizing Committee argues that the women from Europe and North America have been discriminated against because the Games allow only men's ski jumping.

"The failure to include women's ski jumping events in the Games violates every woman's right to equal benefit under the law," according to the lawsuit filed in British Columbia Supreme Court in Vancouver.

Nearly all Olympic sports have both a men's and women's event, but the International Olympic Committee always has exempted ski jumping to let it be a male-only competition.

IOC President Jacques Rogge said in February that only 80 women were competing in the sport, far fewer than for other Olympic sports, and including it in the 2010 Games would dilute the value of medals won in other events.

The women's supporters argue they meet all the technical requirements to qualify, and accuse opponents of being sexist and unwilling to force male ski jumpers to share potential sponsorship money athletes get from being part of the Games.

The Vancouver Organizing Committee said it could not comment on the lawsuit, but noted that only the IOC had the authority to decide what events were held at the Winter and Summer Games.

"We have no vote in this," committee chief executive John Furlong said.

Furlong said the committee did tell the IOC that if it decided to include the women's event the local organizers would make sure they were ready to handle it.

But the Vancouver committee officials also warned that the competition schedule — which has to balance the needs of both athletes and international broadcasters — is scheduled to be finalized by August, and it would be very difficult to change after that.

The lawsuit said the Vancouver Organizing Committee can be sued over the issue because it receives substantial Canadian government funding and is responsible for carrying out government policies to make sure the Games are successful.

The women ski jumpers had filed a complaint with the Canadian Human Rights Commission, but it was settled in January under an agreement with the federal government that called for the dispute to be mediated.

Van Koeverden blasts Stojko for boycott talk

Olympic kayaking champion Adam Van Koeverden is peeved at former figure skating star Elvis Stojko's recent remarks that athletes should "think twice" before going to the Beijing Games.

Van Koeverden, speaking yesterday at a media day at the Burloak Canoe Club in Oakville where he trains, didn't pull any punches when asked about comments Stojko

"I just think if these were his Olympics, he would probably have moderated his comments a little bit more," said Van Koeverden. "I respect him. I respect his comments. Like I said, everybody has a right to their opinion."

Rio Ferdinand and Ryan Giggs, second from right, of Manchester United lift the trophy following their team's 6-5 victory over Premiership rivals Chelsea in the penalty shootout during the UEFA Champions League final yesterday in Moscow. It is the team's third European Cup title.

Man U delivers double

Premier League winners claim Champions title

MANCHESTER UNITED 1 CHELSEA 1 (6-5)

Manchester United were crowned kings of Europe for the third time yesterday when they beat Chelsea 6-5 on penalties after a breathless all-English Champions League final had finished 1-1 after extra time.

United's 37-year-old goalkeeper Edwin van der Sar, appearing in his third final 13 years after his first with Ajax Amsterdam, saved the decisive spot kick from substitute Nicolas Anelka.

The victory completed a famous double for the Old Trafford team, which edged Chelsea for the Premier League title 10 days ago.

It was an emotional triumph for United, coming 50 years after the Munich air disaster, and there was a huge cheer for one of the survivors, Bobby Charlton, when he joined the team at the presentation of the trophy he lifted in 1968 before Alex Ferguson led the team to a second success in 1999.

"We've had fate on our side all season and I felt that fate played its hand with John Terry slipping," Ferguson said of the Chelsea captain's key penalty miss.

It was a heartbreaking night for Terry, who had the chance to take the trophy to Stamford Bridge for the first time but sent what would have been the winning penalty against the outside of the post.

Cristiano Ronaldo scored the first-half opener for Man U, while Frank Lampard had the equalizer.

A new global culture is being created, according to an IDC Canada report. It is a culture based on using technology in common ways.

Super-connected society emerging

PAUL BRENT
technow@ctv.ca

The concept of a new global culture is part of a report done by IDC Canada and commissioned by Nortel in which 2,400 working adults in 17 nations were asked about the technology they use.

The report provides a glimpse of a new kind of person, who crosses all borders and all cultures and is driven by tech.

Sixteen per cent fall into the super-connected category. These people use at least seven devices — i.e., a laptop, cell phone, desktop computer, GPS unit — and they use at least nine applications, such as Facebook, Skype, Second Life, blogs or Twitter.

Is this sounding like your life?

Another 36 per cent are just a few steps behind the super-connected. For over a year now, Nortel has taken the marketing position that the world is moving to hyper connectivity. They wanted IDC to do some research and John Roese, Nortel's CTO, says the results show it's happening even faster than expected.

Most of the super-connected are in China, with high numbers also found in the United States and

Thirty-five per cent of those questioned feel technology helps them balance work and home life; 21 per cent said it makes the balance more difficult.

Russia. Canada — which likes to think of itself as a wired nation — tied for last place with the United Arab Emirates in terms of how much we actually use the technology.

Most of the super-users are under the age of 35 and the study says that as the next generation — one that grew up with tech — enters the workplace, they'll want all the tools they know and love.

Thirty-five per cent of those questioned feel technology helps them balance work and home life; 21 per cent said it makes the balance more difficult.

Overall, the study concluded that the technology is blurring the line between work and home. IDC senior VP Vito Marbrucco told me there is no indication that we have reached the limit on how much technology we can handle.

What this means for employers is that they have to look hard at implementing the latest telecomm tech or they may find potential new employees looking elsewhere.

Is this just marketing hype? IDC stands by the credibility of the study, but the survey certainly plays to Nortel's strengths. The report goes as far as suggesting companies need to buy what Nortel is offering in order to be successful.

At the same time the report is a quick and direct summary of many of the key issues now swirling in the tech world, for both users and for companies.

Renovation revelations

Advance planning can build upon perfect home addition

By SYLVIA PUTZ
for Metro Ottawa

Our family is in the enviable position of being on the almost-finished side of a large addition and interior renovation. And overall, the reno was an incredible adventure for the family — one that we had dreamed about for years. We ended up with a gorgeous house that fits us like a glove. What could be better?

Well, getting there was not always as smooth as we wished. The process was actually fun most of the time, but in the final analysis, we realized that some of our mistakes ended up costing us a lot of extra cash.

In a nutshell, most of our mistakes were largely the result of not planning enough. For those of you contemplating doing a reno, here is our advice, straight from the school of hard knocks.

» Make changes during the planning stage, not the construction stage. Paul Catania of Verly Construction, the head of the company that managed our renovation, puts it plainly: "If it's well planned, and you work through the model at an early stage, you're set. Four months of doing that would have saved six months of work later on."

» Our architect Tony D'Andrea of Torplan Consultants Inc. agrees. "One of the biggest problems is that people don't give themselves enough time — give yourself at least six months for planning, and six to eight months for construction." He emphasizes that the planning must be thorough — including reviewing every aspect of the plan, city permit requirements, parking issues, and a myriad of other details.

» In our case, one of the things that we did wrong was to have hired an interior designer after drywall walls and ceilings were already in place. "It's a lot easier when you make changes before the drywall goes up," notes our on-site contractor Joe Rego, owner of Rego Contracting.

» Make decisions about precisely which fixtures and furniture you will buy as early as you can because the exact measurements of these items will dictate where switches, outlets and plumbing will be placed. Lina Pelaez, our construction coordinator from Verly Construction, notes wryly that these types of decisions should be made before she calls in the trades.

» Be realistic. If you are combining old and new parts of a house during a renovation, budget for uniformity. Don't leave the old part as is, alongside a completely new renovation.

» Our assumptions that we would stay in the house for the duration of the renovation became ridiculous once renovation started in the old part. Joe sums it up succinctly: "With a large reno, move out. That way the contractor has to opportunity to work everywhere, inside and out."

» He also advises that the construction site be emptied for a large project. Ours wasn't. "Freedom of movement makes a big difference in construction — it takes triple the time to move stuff up and down the stairs, and back again, and things are missed" when furniture is piled up along a wall. (Sorry about that, Joe.) » Learn from your mistakes — you never know when you'll get the reno bug again.

« If it's well planned, and you work through the model at an early stage, you're set. Four months of doing that would have saved six months of work later on. »

Paul Catania, Verly Construction

Décor marries reno and existing space

Don't forget to spruce up 'old' sections of house

You can try to fool yourself about this one, but you won't fool anybody else.

We've seen the unfortunate end result of spending money on a lovely addition while leaving the old, cruddy part of the house as it always was.

Don't do it! We know that the marriage of old lived-in space and shiny new renovation doesn't work.

Be realistic in the planning stage of your renovation — you'll need to budget for bringing the whole house up to a reasonable level of "newness." Many people who renovate are trying to save money, and actively avoid thinking about updating the "old" part. (It's called sticking your head in the sand.)

But believe us, you'll end up shelling out cash to fix it up sooner or later, and it

«Many people who renovate are trying to save money, so they actively avoid thinking about updating the 'old' part of their house. (It's called sticking your head in the sand.)» will probably be sooner, because you can't stand to look at that glaring discrepancy any longer. It will bug you every single day you live in that house — it would certainly drive us loco.

Luckily, there are some decor basics in minimizing that divide, and in making the house with a new addition look more unified.

And the cost factor may be much lower than you think.

The first thing is to choose paint colour for the whole house — it must work together.

Depending on the size of your reno, you can decide on the same colour for both the new section and the older one, or you can choose a complimentary colour that looks good with all the other tones in the house.

Don't just paint the new section your favourite colour, and expect it to look good with the existing decor. It won't

Trim is also important — baseboards, trim around windows and trim in any other place should be consistent. If you have wood trim in the old part, you will find that matching that trim is sometimes difficult, and wood nowadays is expensive. If you are doing a large reno, you may find that it is actually cheaper to rip out the old trimwork (ouch!), and replace it with the same painted MDF trim throughout the house.

Another consideration is flooring. If your reno combines old and new space in the same room, you will need to put in new flooring for the whole space.

If the addition is a separate room separated from the old space, you can get away with a change of flooring (such as tile up against wood), as long as it is complimentary, both in color and in mood.

Remember that a well-used wood floor will look strange up against a high-gloss marble tile, for example. Keep the feel of the whole house similar.

Post-reno, you'll want to ensure décor in the existing portion of your house doesn't clash with the new space. Paint colours, for example, must work for the whole house; paint chips by Farrow & Ball.

Metal fixtures, whether they be kitchen faucets, bathroom faucets or door handles, should be similar in look.

Keep the metal the same if possible. That is, use chrome throughout, or antique gold, but don't use one metal and style in the new section and leave another metal and style in the old section.

Last but not least, don't decorate the new section in a style that is vastly different to that in the older part of the house.

Strive to bring the old and new together in terms of style, mood and colour.

After all, if the discrepancy between old and new is the most visible thing about your house, your beautiful new space won't shine the way it should.

Reno mania consumes DIY-ers

Big box stores offer workshops

By RICK MCGINNIS
for Metro Ottawa

The giddy rise of house prices has made bricks and mortar real estate the surest investment most of us will make in our lifetimes, with the result that maintaining and upgrading our investment has become an international obsession. It's a phenomenon that's made hunky contractor Mike Holmes a star, and has filled primetime with countless reality DIY shows from Britain, the U.S. and Canada, all of which have turned home-owning into a continuing domestic drama more compelling than the cooking of meals or the raising of kids — the activities that once seemed to occupy centre stage in our homes.

What we've learned from these shows is that the resale value of our home can be increased with an updating of our bathroom fixtures or an upscale backsplash behind the kitchen counter, while building a nagging anxiety that, hidden behind the plaster and drywall lurks a fiscal liability that could devalue our investment, a fear that becomes livid with the odour of mould in the basement, or with the dreaded words "knob and tube wiring."

While watching the heroic endeavours of Holmes, the high-camp makeover extravagance of Colin and Justin or the bleak comedy of Disaster DIY on HGTV, the knowing homeowner can't help but keep a running tally of what they're seeing, marvelling that every new circuit breaker panel or expanse of glass bathroom tiling would cost at least a week's wages. To that end, we're encouraged to try and save money and do it ourselves, with the proviso that, if we screw it up, we'd might as well have blown that money at the racetrack and hope that the avocado green bathroom will go from tacky to retro by the time we decide to sell up and move.

PAUL BRADURN/OJO IMAGES

We're encouraged to try and save money by renovating our homes ourselves, our writer says.

The biggest beneficiaries of the home reno mania have been big box stores such as Home Depot, Lowe's and Rona, and that boutique clubhouse for the house-proud obsessive, Lee Valley. They've made fortunes accessorizing our nesting, and have turned the hardware store from a storefront that smelled of paint and motor oil into vast warehouses, up to 120,000 square feet of dry-wall tape, flexible conduit and faucet sets that can strike the novice dumb with confusion.

They've also seen the need to teach us how to do all this stuff, right down to the basics of handing our brand new gear. ("Saving Time & Money Using Cordless Power Tool Combo Kits" is the name of a one-hour course Home Depot offers.) The workshops, seminars and clinics the DIY behemoths offer range from bluntly prescriptive ("Fence Building," "Deck and Fence Finishing" and "Laminate Floor Installation" are just three of the no-nonsense clinics Rona offers) to self-affirming (Home Depot's optimistic "You Can Install A Toilet" and "You Can Use A Mitre Saw to Build Frames") to the esoteric, and even academic (Lee Valley's seminars on "Design and Visualization" and "Women And Power Tools.")

Browsing the how-to offerings on the websites of the home reno stores, it becomes clear that, if only for liability's sake, none of them want to encourage us to aspire beyond a certain level of home reno competency. You might become a dab hand at dry-wall or shingling one day, or aspire to replacing the plumbing fixtures in your kitchen and bathroom, but there are some jobs best left to professionals like plumbers and electricians, and the judgment of city inspectors. The pride and savings you might cherish at the end of a DIY endeavour is likely to wither away in the rosy glow of an electrical fire as it consumes the new addition you built to showcase your Star Wars memorabilia and add five grand to the resale value of your bungalow.

You might think that doing that home renovation project yourself is the way to go: You'll certainly save cash, and after all, it doesn't look that hard, does it?

But there are dangers to cutting corners, says Warren Kuchta, national installation merchant at Home Depot. Your job may be harder than it looks, and if you don't have the time, knowledge or experience needed to properly renovate, you could be costing yourself more money and time in the long run.

"You might think it's all really easy, but if you really want it to look right, you have to have done it a lot before," he says.

Among the most common projects people do themselves — and often poorly — Kuchta says, are floorings, kitchen renovations, plumbing and electricity, particularly dangerous work for those who don't have a firm grasp of what to do. He adds

«It's not only about whether it's easy to do, it's about whether you have the time to do it.»

there's also a legal issue: Unless you're in the business, you probably won't know how to draft and submit plans in order to obtain building permits.

Beyond the logistics of DIY, hiring someone in the know frees you up to enjoy your summer, Kuchta says, and not spend it working on a project you won't enjoy in the peak season.

"It's not only about whether or not it's easy to do, it's about whether or not you have the time to do it. What is your time worth? Is it worth hiring somebody who you know is going to do it right no matter what and you're going to be satisfied so you can enjoy it sooner, or are you really going to struggle with it for the next few months?"

building permits

If you're adding or altering your home in a major way, chances are you're going to need a building permit — a legal document that grants you permission to begin your project. To obtain one, you'll have to make sure your work complies with local community safety standards and building codes. If you go ahead without one, you could be denied insurance coverage, face higher permit or repair fees, or even be ordered to undo your work.

Now that you're nice and discouraged — here are some home renos you can do that don't require a permit, according to Home-base.ca:

- » Replacement of stucco, siding or shingles with the same material used before
- » Replacing doors, so long as the opening isn't altered
- » Replacing an open landing and/or stairs
- » Building fences
- » Painting, patching, decorating
- » Installing a cabinet or a shelf

Check with your local permits office for details on what you can and cannot do.

Tortilla Española (Spanish potato omelette)

A timeless classic, the Spanish potato omelette can be cut into wedges for brunch or small squares for an appetizer and served with spicy salsa. This recipe is adapted from the Culinary Institute of America's Spain and the World Table.

INGREDIENTS:

8 Yukon Gold potatoes, peeled and sliced 1/8-inch thick (about 2 lbs/900 g)
1-3/4 tsp salt, divided
1/2 cup + 2 tbsp olive oil, divided
1 cup chopped yellow onions
1/3 cup chopped red bell peppers
1/3 cup chopped green bell peppers
1-1/2 cups prosciutto, diced (125 g package)
10 large eggs

METHOD:

Toss potatoes with 1 teaspoon salt in large bowl. Heat 1/2 cup olive oil in large, non-stick frying pan over medium heat. Add potatoes. Cook, stirring occasionally, until potatoes soften but don't brown, about 5 minutes. Add onions, peppers and prosciutto. Cook 10 minutes until potatoes are tender and ingredients well blended. Transfer to colander placed over bowl and drain off liquid. Clean pan. In large bowl, beat eggs. Stir in potato mixture and add 3/4 teaspoon salt. Return pan to medium heat. Add 2 tablespoons olive oil; pour in egg mixture when oil is very hot. Tilt pan so eggs evenly cover bottom. Reduce heat to low. Cook, shaking pan once or twice, until omelette has set, about 10 minutes. Cover pan with large plate. Invert so omelette is cooked side up on plate. Slide back into pan and cook other side until lightly browned, about 5 minutes. Slide omelette onto plate. Cool to room temperature before slicing. Makes about 8 servings.

Indiana Jones And The Kingdom Of The Crystal Skull

Stars Harrison Ford, Shia LaBeouf
Director Steven Spielberg

PG

By CHRIS ATCHISON
for Metro Ottawa

REVIEW FILM FANS

YOUNG and old will be hard-pressed to miss the smile creeping across their face when they hear John Williams' famed score and see that trademark fedora make its first big screen appearance in 19 years, in a much-anticipated re-introduction to the greatest adventure character of all time.

It's a welcomed reunion and from its opening scenes, it's clear that Indiana Jones And The Kingdom Of The Crystal Skull is equal parts homage to the beloved series and progression of the archaeologist's perennially-exciting story.

In this installment, an evil corps of Russians is hunting down the mysterious and powerful crystal skull, an ancient Mayan relic said to pre-date the Egyptian pyramids.

Jones (Harrison Ford), accompanied by a misfit named Mutt Williams (an impressive performance by Transformers' Shia LaBeouf), sets out on a journey to find the skull and figure out the secrets behind its alleged powers before the Soviets net the treasure and possibly gain an upper hand in the raging Cold War.

Along the way Jones reunites with Marion Ravenwood (Raiders Of The Lost Ark's Karen Allen) and joins forces with a host of characters including his treasure-hunting partner Mac (Ray Winstone).

And that's about all that can be said about the plot of the new Indiana Jones flick without giving away key details — but it should be noted that this storyline has more twists than Indy's whip, making for a fun ride from start to finish.

Director Steven Spielberg and writer-producer George Lucas have indeed brought Dr. Jones back in style. The action sequences come fast and furious and Indy is still up to the task — at 65, Ford still makes a believable, appropriately weathered, swashbuckler — while screenwriter David Koepp (War Of The Worlds) adds ample references to the passing of time since we last saw our hero ride off into the sunset at the finale of Indiana Jones and The Last Crusade.

That's a key reason why this series has worked so well and still resonates with audiences. Indiana Jones is a vulnerable hero. He ages and shows it, he makes mistakes and has his vulnerabilities — namely a fear of snakes, his love for Marion and a desire for altruism over greed.

While the dialogue plods at times and a few scenes are more than a little far-fetched, The Kingdom Of The Crystal Skull is pure summertime blockbuster joy.

Cook rocks to American Idol crown

By SANDY CAETANO
for Metro Ottawa

David Cook, the rocker and former bartender from Blue Springs, Mo., was crowned this season's champion during last night's star-studded two-hour finale of American Idol.

It was a surprise the all-American boy next door, David Archuleta 17, wasn't the one to win since all the girls seemed to have gone crazy for him. But he lost to his fellow competitor by a difference of 12 million votes. It was the highest number of votes ever in American Idol history, after 97.5 million votes were cast for the final two, smashing the record by more than 23 million.

Last night's finale featured the return of the Top 12, including Cook and Archuleta, who opened the show with a group number followed by another performance of Chad Kroeger's Hero by the final two.

Promoting the film The Love Guru and offering advice to Cook and Archuleta was Guru Pitka, also known as Emmy Award-winning Canadian actor Mike Myers.

Among the performers were Seal, Donna Summer, who sang her new single Stamp Your Feet, Canadian singer/songwriter Bryan Adams, ZZ Top, Graham Nash, The Jonas Brothers and One Republic. George Michael even made an appearance.

Jordin Sparks, last season's American Idol winner, and Carrie Underwood also made appearances.

"For the first time ever I don't really care who wins," said Cowell, commenting on how great both the final competitors are.

"I started this season ... as the word nerd, and I'm very much at a loss for words," said Cook after the results were read, before singing his new single Time Of My Life.

HERE WE GO AGAIN:

Every year around this time, after the tumbrels have rolled and the blade has come down on the last of the year's failed shows, the numbers are crunched and the cumulative ratings winner of the TV season just ended is announced. For the last few years — or basically as long as I've been writing this column — the big news is usually that Fox has done well, really well, and has either threatened to unseat NBC or CBS for their customary post at the top of the ratings ladder.

It's a funny ritual — if you find ratings tallies and the imprecise language of demography funny. (I do, which is why you don't want to invite me to parties.) CBS' presumed lead for the last few years has been harder to defend, as Fox has taken the lead in more and more key ratings demographics, and has been unofficially crowned winner-in-every-way-that-matters for at least the last two years.

It's been an irritating little ritual to watch, year after year, and it sometimes seemed like the squeamishness about the obvious truth was motivated by the continued perception of Fox as the upstart, the scrawny fox set among the regal network chickens. After reading the round-ups, with their careful parsing of the ratings, I always wanted to hit the caps key on my keyboard and writing something like FOX IS THE NUMBER ONE NETWORK ALREADY CAN'T WE JUST GET USED TO IT?

This year, there's no point even pretending anymore, as the Los Angeles Times business section ran a story yesterday that the Nielsen numbers have awarded Fox "the largest audience in prime time." The big "but" to the story is that, given the dismal shambles that characterized the 2007-08 season, which began with a generally unimpressive slate of new shows before being derailed by the writers' strike, Fox's ascension to the throne feels like being crowned king of some plague-wracked, war-ravaged kingdom.

So You Think You Can Dance

"American Idol" is over for another season, but if you like star-making competitions, its dance counterpart is back for another season. Like "Idol," it starts out presenting the highlights and lowlights from auditions around the country, so if you enjoy watching the cluelessly untalented make fools of themselves on national television, now's the time to watch. Cat Deeley returns as host. 7 PM on 7 CTV 104 CTV; 8 PM on 36 FOX

Ugly Betty

Henry, your timing needs work. In the season finale, Betty (America Ferrara) gets a romantic offer from Gio (Freddy Rodriguez) and a visit from Henry (Christopher Gorham), who has his own proposition for her. Wilhelmina (Vanessa Williams) tries to strike out supermodel Naomi Campbell (guest starring as herself) at a softball game between Mode and Elle. Real-life Elle editors Joe Zee and Robbie Myers also guest star in "Jump." 8 PM on 20 ABC 15 CITY

Spike rips Coens at Cannes film fest

DIRECTORS Spike Lee is in Cannes to promote a new film, but he couldn't resist taking a few swipes at some fellow directors, including Joel and Ethan Coen. Speaking about his World War II drama Miracle at St. Anna, Lee said that, unlike the Coens, he was respectful in the way he portrayed death.

"I always treat life and death with respect, but most people don't," Lee said. "Look, I love the Coen brothers; we all studied at NYU. But they treat life like a joke."

The digits 1 through 9 will appear exactly once in each row, each column, and each zone. (A zone is an outlined 3x3 grid within the larger puzzle grid. There are nine of these zones in the puzzle.) Do not enter a digit into a box if it already appears elsewhere in the same 3x3 zone, or in the same row across the puzzle, or column down the puzzle.

Denise Richards says an e-mail purported to be from her to ex-Charlie Sheen's now-fiancee Brooke Mueller asking for his sperm donation is "not legitimate."

"It's a doctored e-mail," she said on the Today show yesterday when asked about the e-mail, which came to light during her divorce battle with Sheen. "I would never send an e-mail to [Mueller], and, at the time of that e-mail, I was with [Richie Sambora]. If I wanted anybody's sperm, I'd have asked for Richie's," she said. Sheen said in a statement to Today that Richards' claims are "absurd."

"The mere fact she continues to publicly discuss and harass both Brooke and me three years after our separation which, for the record, is longer than the actual length of the marriage, is beyond desperate and speaks volumes," he said. Sheen added: "I will no longer sit back and be egregiously painted as a liar. If any proof can be established that these are not in fact her words and statements verbatim, I openly invite her and would even encourage Ms. Richards to sue me in a court of law." On Tuesday, Richards also blamed the media for her breakup with Sambora, saying they suggested she came between the musician and his ex-wife, Heather Locklear. "They [Sambora and Locklear] were getting divorced; he and I were friends and it happened," Richards told Larry King.

"And she had moved on. She was already involved with someone else at the time. It (the press coverage) affected, I think, the circumstances. It was very difficult to sustain a relationship. We were so slammed in the press ... but I did not split up their marriage."

Billy Bob Thornton is at the centre of a bizarre new police report filed by his former sister-in-law, according to Tmz.com. Elysabeth Cherniak claims the actor has bugged her home and regularly sends her insulting e-mails. A spokesman for the actor says, "Billy doesn't use e-mail and never has. Anyone who knows him would know that."

Law takes issue with makeout shots

Jude Law has sparked rumours he is dating veteran rocker Rod Stewart's daughter Kimberly Stewart, after pictures of the pair enjoying a steamy clinch were published by a British tabloid newspaper. The actor was caught on camera cavorting with the 28-year-old model at a nightspot in Essex, England, on Saturday by revellers who snapped the pair in a passionate embrace.

The pictures, which were published by The Sun newspaper, show the pair passionately kissing in the club's VIP area. According to a source at the club, the 35-year-old was enraged to discover he had been photographed — allegedly ordering the club's security personnel to erase the pictures from the reveller's digital camera. The source tells The Sun, "Two bodyguards then came over to us and snatched the camera out of my friend's hand. They passed the camera to Jude, who then looked through our photos."

Law has four children with ex-wife actress Sadie Frost, who he divorced in 2003. He was engaged to Sienna Miller before the pair split in 2006 amid rumours he had cheated with his children's nanny.

Portman's sex regret

Natalie Portman regrets filming a naked sex scene. The actress said she has no problem with nudity in films, but wishes she had not stripped off for Wes Anderson's Hotel Chevalier after discovering her picture on porn sites. The star also felt the press focused too much on the scene, rather than the film itself.

She said: "I'm not prudish about nudity. I think it's beautiful in films, and sex is such a big part of life. But my picture ended up on porn sites, and that's the dilemma."

Hotel Chevalier is a short film which acts as a prologue to Anderson's feature film The Darjeeling Limited and also stars Jason Schwartzman.

Portman — who also played a stripper in 2004's Closer — had previously insisted she would never appear in a nude scene.

Video of wilder times?

Before she was lauded for her humanitarian work, Angelina Jolie was known as the wild child of Hollywood.

Now, according to InTouch weekly, a video showing the actress in a drug den has surfaced. In the video, Angelina allegedly smokes, babbles about S&M sex and killing her pet animals while a woman smokes an unknown substance next to her.

Jolie has publicly admitted to her drug past before, having said, "I've done coke, heroin, ecstasy, LSD, everything. I gave them up long ago."

According to the U.K.'s Sun newspaper, she was apparently a regular at the drug den in New York's once infamous Chelsea Hotel, and a fellow regular said, "Even back then I remember her talking about how she'd adopt a huge family from around the world."

Dylan divorcing

Actor Dylan McDermott filed for divorce from wife Shiva Rose after 12 years of marriage in L.A. Superior Court on May 16. McDermott, 46, cited irreconcilable differences, according to court documents obtained by Us magazine.com.

Custody of their two daughters, Collette, 12, and Charlotte, 2, will be decided at a later date.

In 2001, McDermott gushed to Diane Sawyer, "I was in love with [Shiva] right away. For her, it was a little longer, you know, a couple of years. But for me, it was right away. I guess it was grace."
